Buninyong Primary School Annual Japanese Theme Day

On Friday 21st November, Buninyong Primary School held their annual Japanese Theme Day. For the entire day, students enjoyed a variety of activities designed to encourage and promote an interest in cultural differences. Students from grade 3 onwards participated in a sport event called 'Undoukai'. They rotated through 6 different activities. Some of the photos are here. The younger grades learnt a famous Japanese folktale called 'Momotaro' (The Peach Boy). Many craft activities were to help students use their imagination and have something wonderful that they could take home to show their family. We look forward to hosting the event again next year.

Ten metres to Zero in Ten days

That's the flowering and subsequent death of the tropical American Furcraea plants at historic Eurambeen near Beaufort!

Having spent years storing sufficient energy the Furcraea plant sends up a flowering spire that contains the bulbils that will ensure the survival of its species; only to die soon after. This dramatic plant was just one of the features of the house and garden when a group from the Friends of the Buninyong Botanic Gardens visited Eurambeen which is being restored by current owners Sarah Beaumont and Ian Glover.

The main part of the garden at the front of the house was designed by Edna Walling during her 'English garden' phase after being commissioned by early owners, the Beggs family.

The group had earlier visited nearby 'Belmont': a cottage-style garden according to owner Jocelyn Reid who is descended from the original settler, engineer James Frazer Watkin. Belmont was built in 1861 beside the water race to the nearby goldfields that was Watkin's particular interest. The house also features Scandinavian influence in the designs on the house. There is much of historical interest in this Victorian Heritage Registered house and garden - so much so that it is also nurtured by the Australian Garden History Society.

Belmont also features a delightful lily pond, with its diverse aquatic life, that enabled the visitors to gain some quiet reflective time – surely the reason for any garden.

A pair of tropical American Furcraea plants, in a once-in-their-lifetime flowering, dominate the skyline at historic Eurambeen near Beaufort, during a visit by a group from the Friends of the Buninyong Botanic Gardens. The tall spires have grown dramatically over past months but will wither and die post-flowering.

The gifts are distributed through welfare agencies such as St Vincent de Paul, Anglicare and Uniting care Ballarat.
